

Breakfast With The Cars Oran Park 10 July

'Breakfast-with-the-cars', always a good idea, except that this particular day was raining, a leftover from the four huge deluge days for the Sydney/Illawarra/Hunter regions, so the turnout was a little less than expected but completely understandable.

Like so many other motor racing circuits close to built-up areas, Oran Park has succumbed to Sydney's urban sprawl and is now just another housing estate. The good news is that some of the history has been retained, especially 'Grandstand Park', just a short drive from the Grid Cafe where we had breakfast. Another visit will surely be arranged in the future.

David Bursill

Photos: John Bowmer

The track has gone, but there were plenty of links with the past, including street names and the roof of the 'grandstand'.

